OPEN POHICK CHURCH

Noted Families Worship in Washington's Sanctuary.

EDIFICE BUILT 133 YEARS AGO

Descendants of Revolutionary War Heroes Attend First Service in Remodeled Structure that the Father of His Country Planned-Interior and Furnishings Are Restored.

The old church at Pohick, Fairfax erick, Md. County, Virginia, where George Washington worshipped 133 years ago, remo eled and decorated with colonial furniture, was opened yesterday. Representa-tives of the Washington family took a prominent part in the services. Descendants of other noted Virginia families co- Series of Three Meetings Held at operated and contributed to the fund which made the restoration of the his-

While descendants of Virginia's aristocracy bowed their heads, Mr. Meade pronounced the solemn and impressive ritual of the Episcopal Church. Wallis stood within the old chancel by communion table of a hundred years ago In the rear of the building was the original font of the original church that had been taken away a few years after its opening and was restored several years ago, after almost a century.

History of the Parish.

Dr. Wallis outlined the history of the parish, which was founded in 1732. Rev Charles Green and Rev. Lee Massey, one of Washington's companions, were the rectors at the time Washington and Col. George Mason attended regular meetings and were instrumental in its building. He recalled incidents of those who had occupied the first pews. Bishop Meade, who was the grandfather of the present rector, visited the church in 1837. The Daughters of the Revolution and other patriotic societies and descendants of the old pew-holders, and their friends, were complimented for their work, The old church is on an eminence north of Pohick Creek, surrounded by ancient oaks interspersed with chestnut and pine trees, and stands as a monument to the Father of his country and his associates. Mount Vernon, George Washington's old nome, is six miles away. The land between is covered by a dense forest.

The original Pohick Church was established in 1732, two miles south of the present site. It was a frame building, and after many years collapsed. Washington drew the plans for the new building and obtained the site now occupied. For twenty years he was one of the vestrymen. Years later Washington began attending Christ Church, at Alexandria, and the attendance at Pohick fell away from that time until eventually the church was deserted.

Falls Into Disuse. From time to time services were held there by the different denominations, whenever the opportunity presented itself. One of those who officiated at Pohick after regular services had ceased was the eccentric Mason L. Weems, the earliest biographer of George Washington. About thirty years ago, after the walls had been bare since the civil war, the building was partly restored, and in 1881 made by the Sergeants-at-arms of the Dr. Wallis became the regular rector. He remained fourteen years, when he acepted his present position at the semi-lary. He was succeeded by Rev. H. F. Kloman, who remained two years. Kloman is now living in Portland, Me.
